Master of Counseling Degree in Clinical Rehabilitation Counseling

Clinical Rehabilitation Counseling assists persons with physical, mental, developmental, cognitive, and emotional disabilities to achieve their personal, career, and independent living goals in the most integrated setting possible through the counseling process. The counseling process involves communication, goal setting, and beneficial growth or change through self-advocacy, psychological, vocational, social, and behavioral interventions.

The program prepares counselors to provide:

Counseling focused on facilitating adjustment to medical and psychosocial impact of disability.
